The World's Record of Unsteady Golf Playing.

In the July American Magazine Jerome D. Travers, four times amateur golf champion of America, writes a highly entertaining and instructive article entitled, "The Secret of Steady Golf" in which he tells many remarkable stories. Following is his account of the most erratic game on record:

"The world's record for unsteadiness probably goes to a certain California golfer. There was a team-matched scheduled between two clubs, each club picking its five best men. When the match started it was discovered that only four men had reported for one of the teams. The captain of the team that had a missing man saw standing by a club member with a handicap somewhere around 16 or 18 strokes. His average game was about 98. As a rule he could be counted upon to go out in 50 and come back in 48. That day, to his own amazement and to the confusion of his opponent, he was out in 34—eleven strokes better than he had ever played the course, before for the first nine holes. This was an upset, but no worse than the upset that followed, for after being out in 84, he was back in 55. He got his 97, but as no 97 was ever gotten before."

WOMEN HONORED FOR VALOR

France Has Always Been in the Lead in Recognizing the Services of the Fair Sex.

Seldom in the world's history have women been decorated for valor on the battlefield, for the simple reason that opportunities for deeds which would earn them such decorations are very few. Nevertheless, instances can be found, and nowhere more than in France, where the heroic woman has little to complain of as regards public recognition of her services.

Since Napoleon founded the Cross of the Legion of Honor on May 19, 1802, probably a score or more women have been decorated for personal bravery in warfare, but unfortunately only one or two of their names have been preserved, as the palace of the Legion d'Honneur was burned during the commune and all records were destroyed.

Napoleon decorated at least seven women for valor. The chief of these was Anne Biget (Sœur Marthe), who was a sister of mercy, and earned the Cross of Legion of Honor for her devotion to the sick and wounded, in the care of whom she risked her life constantly. The other women on whom Napoleon bestowed the cross were disciples of Joan of Arc, who shared the perils and hardships of their men folk, enlisting and fighting gallantly.

Another woman earned the decoration for valor when France was fighting Germany in 1870. Mlle. Dodu, a postmistress at Pithiviers, a village which had fallen into the hands of the invaders, destroyed a message which she had been ordered to transmit. For this she was court-martialed by the Germans and condemned to death. On the arrival of Prince Frederick, however, she was released, the prince himself complimenting her for her courage.

FISH GATHER IN MILLIONS

Remarkable Schools of Herrings That Annually Assemble on the North Pacific Coast.

Every summer there is a remarkable run of herring on the north Pacific coast. These fish come in such shoals that they seem a solid moving mass. They crowd into the inlets and sheltered bays and can be taken in millions by the simplest means. Men and boys on the Grand Trunk Pacific dock at Prince Rupert use waste paper baskets, and similar utensils, which, with rope attached are thrown into the water and allowed to sink below the surface, then hauled in again full of overflowing with lovely herring.

But a better idea of the density of these schools of fish is afforded by the fact that fishing lines with hook attached can be sunk in the water, and pulled out instantly with just as many fish as there are hooks, be there a dozen or fifty.

Tons of these herrings are taken by the fish companies and frozen in boxes for use as bait for the halibut fisheries. They are an excellent table fish, and there ought to be a profitable market for them in the interior. As yet comparatively few of them are shipped, though dealers are now calling for them.

Fishermen say the herrings seek the bays to escape the whales, which prey on them in certain localities during their migrations.

Working a Ship to Death.

A curious instance of a craft being worked to death is reported from Baltimore, where the schooner Johnnie Green was seized for claims by the crew. There was due the six men the sum of $193.30, which under normal conditions might be raised by a mortgage on the boat. "But she's got enough mortgages on her now to sink her," said Captain White, "and I could not borrow another cent. There's $700 or $800 lent on her already." When told that the Johnnie Green was forty-two years old, and had been in the bay service all of that time, Marshal Stockham was ready to believe that no more money could be borrowed on her. He ordered her taken in charge and a watchman put aboard.

—Nautical Gazette.

Defective.

A farmer, in looking his car over one day, thrust a lighted match into the gasoline tank. The ensuing explosion laid him up for several weeks. On the first day that he was able to be about he visited the storekeeper who had sold him the stuff and demanded compensation.

"Why should I pay you anything?" asked the merchant hotly. "It was your own fault. You knew it was gasoline."

"That's all right, but this accident was caused by defective gasoline."

"Defective gasoline?"

"Yes, sir. I've been sticking matches into gasoline that I've bought here before, and this was the first lot that ever acted that way."

Canton Ivory Shops.

There are about forty shops in Canton, China, where articles of ivory are made and sold. The industry may be divided into two stages, cutting and carving. Tools imported from Siam constitute the raw material. These are first cut with a saw to the shape capable of being worked up by carving. The carving apparatus consists of a wooden block, a saw and a tub of water. The ivory is secured firmly, moistened with water, and cut the required shape. The cutting finished, the blocks are then carved into shape with knives of many different shapes.

Children five years and under 12 years of age, one-half of above fares. A GREAT OPPORTUNITY to visit the Blue Ridge Mountains, the most picturesque region in the Eastern United States.

SEVEN MILES UNDER GROUND: Between Marion and Altapass there are seven miles of tunnels hewn through solid rock. There are many places along the route where several elevations of track can be seen at once. The train simply works its way to the top of the mountains, encircling one peak and passing directly through others. Over sixty mountain peaks with an altitude exceeding 6,000 feet can be seen along the route.

Mr. G. H. Mahon, the veteran excursionist, has been secured by the management to look after the operation of this special train. Don't forget that this excursion will run, RAIN OR SHINE, on Wednesday, June 30th.

HAS CARRIED AN INSURANCE POLICY
NEARLY 70 YEARS

Joseph L. Winslow Celebrates His 84th Birthday.

Joseph L. Winslow of 283 Forest ave., today, is not only one of the best men who celebrates his 84th birthday known and most esteemed of Portland's older citizens, but has the distinction of being the oldest holder of a life insurance policy in New England, if not in the United States. Mr. Winslow is one of an original family of 19 children, seven boys and three girls; and comes of good old Pilgrim stock, his ancestors beyond his paternal grandfather, having come to Plymouth in the Mayflower, and their history and genealogy is voluminous and interesting, as is the coat of arms of the Winslow and Hersey families which hang on the walls of the living room in the cozy home on Forest avenue where Mr. Winslow lives with his sister, Mrs. Harriet Winslow Hersey. Mr. Winslow is the son of the late Daniel Winslow, and a grandson of David Winslow, a famous leading Quaker more than a hundred years ago. The house built by the latter stands only a few doors away from the present homestead, and in its 16 rooms the Quaker sympathizers used frequently to gather. One door north of the Winslow-Hersey home is the old house built in 1805 also by Grandfather Winslow, and the exterior is practically the same as ever.

Mr. Winslow's father was a far sighted man, and consequently when the son Joseph was 15 years of age, or on January 11, 1846, he took out in Mutual Benefit Company of New York, for $3,500, calling for an annual premium of $4.00 and offering no cash or loan values and no special privileges, only a promise to pay the death claim to the beneficiaries of the insured in case of death. In those days life insurance policies never contained such provisions. At that time went on, however, the scope of insurance broadened, and the Mutual Benefit, while not obliged to do so, kept Mr. Winslow's policy in line with the most modern that were issued from time to time, granting unaltered every conceivable mode in the newer policy holders. The net result of the part of Mr. Winslow to the 70 years has been $1,240.00 in dividends having received $2,285.25 to that date.

Mr. Winslow could now surrender his policy and receive in cash nearly $2,500 for each dollar expended in premiums, besides having enjoyed 70 years of protection.

JOSEPH H. WINSLOW IS 84 TODAY

During the past few days Mr. Winslow has been the recipient of congratulatory letters from the president of the company, and other officers at the headquarters of the Mutual Benefit, as well as from many of its representatives throughout the whole country, wishing him many happy returns of his birthday, and expressing their appreciation of his lifelong connection with the company. There were also many boxes of choice cigars sent him by his Mutual Benefit friends in honor of the occasion. Mr. Winslow has been in the business of a general machinist all his life, and is still seen in the city daily, his kindly disposition making him a welcome visitor. He believes his present bodily health and advanced age to be due to a system of right living and thinking. He is a wide reader and a daily patron of the Express-Advertiser, and is a citizen who apparently enjoys life as well as many men half his age. Express of Portland, Oregon.
